More pop-up farms coming to West Sac

SARA BERNAL is the point person for the Center of Land-Based Learning's urban farm program in West Sacramento (News-Ledger file photo/2014)

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

The "urban farm" concept is still growing in West Sacramento.

Partners including the City of West Sacramento and the Center for Land-Based Learning produced the first attention-getting little farm at 3rd and C streets near the I Street Bridge last year. They trucked in soil to create a farm on a vacant lot in a partly-redeveloped neighborhood that still has its share of blight.

Sara Bernal of the Center told the News-Ledger last week that several more pop-up farms are ready to be sown around the city, both north and south:

"Our second farm will be at Cummins and Douglas, which is going to be shared by two farmers," said Bernal. "It should be ready by spring. Right now, one farmer is using cover crops and we are building infrastructure. Come March, we'll start bringing in soil amendments. It will be in production by summer."

Also:
"We have a lease on three acres on Lake Washington Boulevard, right behind Nugget Market," Bernal added. "We are wrangling sponsors now, so hopefully we'll get that farm started by this summer."

And:
"We have two acres available through Washington Unified School District, where we'll be starting another farm. It's at 919 Westacre Road, behind the Collings Teen Center. It's funded by Raley's. The farm will be growing food for Raley's 'Food for Families' program."

Meanwhile, back at the first site at 5th and C, there are plans to build a farmstand across the street in what's now a garage. The farmstand will help sell the produce from all of West Sacramento's new urban farms.

The local urban farm program was recently awarded a grant of $40,000 in cash and donations from the U.S. Conference of Mayors and Scott's Miracle-Gro.

Local leaders hope the temporary farms will provide a positive use on what otherwise might be neglected or blighted property—as well as provide a start for young farmers and some fresh produce for local neighborhoods.

Becoming a 'chicken whisperer'?

Jamie Putnam of West Sacramento has trained service dogs, and now she's training chickens—which makes sense, for what other species could be both a family pet and provide eggs for breakfast?

"I'm taking a dog training class where I not only have to train dogs, but also train a different species," Jamie explained. "Since my husband and I were always interested in having chickens for the eggs, we decided that now would be a good time for us to get them so I could use the chickens in my animal training class."

"I have never had any kind of bird in my life so these chickens are in the hands of a novice," Jamie said. "We picked up three eight-week-old Barred Rocks this morning and they are happily pecking the ground in their new coop."

"I learned that the Barred Rocks are a calm breed and would be suitable as a family pet. So far, every time we go out, they come to us. They are not shy. They are not flighty—so it seems like a good breed."

"I try to bring a treat to them every time I visit the coop so they will associate me with good things. That is step one."

Jamie is waiting for the syllabus for her course in animal behavior and training. "I don't know anything about chickens, so I will be learning what I need to train, and what they expect."

Jamie was born in Alabama and lived in Florida, Texas, Colorado and Kansas before settling in California. She has degrees in Marketing and Accounting. She is married to Chris Brungardt, an environmental consultant.

For a time, Jamie lived in Santa Rosa, California. "In Santa Rosa, it was common to see people walking and training dogs because Santa Rosa is the national headquarters of a service dog organization. She had noticed that the service dogs-in-training wore identification capes."

"By the time I was finally able to train a service dog, we were living in Kansas," Jamie noted. "So, I started out raising puppies in Kansas. I raised one at a time. It was a lot of

Local Sac City College branch lays plans to expand

By Steve Marschke

With public speakers, cookies and a martial arts performance, West Sacramento's branch of Sacramento City College celebrated five years on West Capitol Avenue last Thursday afternoon.

The branch's success, and the partnerships that helped bring that success, were themes of the day.

Mayor Christopher Cabaldon noted that the college took a gamble

Stealing a fellow's bike is mighty personal

This past week my bike was stolen. It was an old bicycle, always in need of repairs that a good friend from my Army days had sold to me over a decade ago for $100, and I have been thinking about replacing it for ages. But I had put a lot of fun miles on that old bike, and I will miss it.

Bicycle theft is a big problem in West Sacramento, as it is in most communities. A number of my friends and neighbors have had their bikes stolen, and often in broad daylight right out of their garages, which is what happened to me. I mean, you can't keep your garage door down forever, and thieves apparently like to stroll around (or ride around on other stolen bikes), look inside an open garage, see something they like, and then come back later at a more opportune time to steal it. And good luck if you forget to lock your bike up if you ride it to work or a store, something I have done from time to time, once having had to run down a bike thief who was happily strolling off with the bike I had left unlocked in front of the News-Ledger.

Bike theft has become such a big problem across the bridge in Sacramento that police there have resorted to putting out "bait bikes" in various locations throughout the city. They are equipped with hidden electronic tracking devices which officers can easily trace, leading them right to the suspected thief. In the Sacramento Bee article I read about that police program, bait bikes have led to more than 50 arrests in Sacramento County over the past year and reduced bicycle theft by 25%. The article, written by the Bee's Sam Stanton, also included an interesting website (sacbike.org) where citizens can go to find lots of helpful tips on how to prevent bike theft, including the most important preventative measure, choosing a proper lock.

I actually pride myself on not becoming too attached to the material things in this world, knowing that they come and go and that they're really not all that important to living a good life. But I think a man's (or woman's) bike is different. Maybe it's because our very first bike is such a big deal. It's usually given to us by our parents (in my case, my grandparents) as a birthday or Christmas present, and not only is it shiny and new and "the best present ever", but it's so adult-looking, and in many ways, our first true encounter with all the possibilities that go along with real freedom. And I can still remembering the joy that was part of jumping on my first bike, riding like the wind, and leaving all of the world's rules and regulations in the dust.

When I was growing up on Michigan Boulevard here in West Sacramento, a boy's bike was everything to him. On weekends or during our long, hot summer vacations from school, we all climbed on our bikes as soon as we had finished breakfast, usually ending up at a friend's house or at some athletic field, playing whatever sport was in season at that time. If it was baseball season, my friends and I often used our bikes to create the fences we needed to hit our home runs over, and if it was football season, our parked bikes were the sidelines or the back of the end zone. Plus in my case, I needed my bike for my newspaper route, and it had to be sturdy and reliable because I had to throw two very heavy bags full of papers on it every day, one on the handlebars and the other on the rear bumper. It also had to be a fast bike, since the day hardly passed without someone's dog thinking it was great sport to chase me away from his house and off his street.

I get it that bicycles are relatively easy to steal and that thieves can turn them over quickly for enough money to keep them supplied with drugs for another few days. And I also understand that it's one of those crimes where the criminal knows the punishment for committing it is next to nothing should he somehow be caught. But it's still hard to think we live in a world where people will shamelessly steal things right out of your garage in broad daylight. I guess with us human beings, knowing the difference between right and It's still hard to think we live in a world where people will shamelessly steal things right out of your garage in broad daylight. I guess with us human beings, knowing the difference between right and wrong will always be a work in progress.

Anyway, having long believed that we should all be forgiving whenever possible, I think I will end this sad little column by advising the thief who stole my bike (should he be capable of reading a newspaper) that he needs to be very careful when riding it. If you bend forward and put too much weight on the handlebars, you could have a real big problem on your hands, because the threads which keep them secured to the bike were stripped ages ago. So it's actually kind of an art to successfully ride my bike without the handlebars loosening up on you, and when that happens, you can easily lose your grip, fly right over the top of them, and land on your head, which I have done more than once.

Oh, and the unforgiving side of me is hoping that if you haven't already sold my beloved old bike for pennies on the dollar, that you're still riding it, and that when you do go flying over the handlebars, you will not have been successful enough at your chosen trade to have ever invested in a really good bicycle helmet!

COLLEGE: ultimately, plans are to triple in size from page one

ART PIMENTAL
Dean of the West Sacramento branch of Sac City

on building the new center when demand for community college classes in West Sacramento was unproven. Previously, the college had only offered a limited number of classes in this city in borrowed classrooms. And the branch also took a gamble by choosing a site on troubled West Capitol Avenue — on a stretch that's now partially redeveloped near city hall. Cabaldon said the college's leadership decided, "We're going to open a new center — we're going to double-down, triple down."

And from the city's point of view:

"We anchored our entire downtown, which didn't exist, to this facility."

Now the 1000-block of West Capitol includes the college, city hall, a transit center, community center and nearby library.

Mary Leland, an administrator at the college as well as a West Sacramento school board member, noted the "extraordinary partnerships" involved in the city's college, school system and city programs. The college's local presence started in 1999 with three classrooms and a computer lab on Halyard Drive.

In 2010, it moved into its new three-story building at 1115 West Capitol Avenue, with 11 classrooms, a computer lab, and expanded course offerings. It combined with the college's Downtown Center and serves about 2,600 students, according to its dean, Art Pimental.

"Roughly about 30 percent of our student body have West Sacramento addresses," Pimental later told the News-Ledger. He also outlined the center's expansion plans:

"Basically, the plans are to have two additional facilities here at the site," said Pimental. "Two additional phases. At final buildout, the site will be approximately 80,000 square feet. The current facility is 25,000 square feet."

A 2008 bond measure raised $475 million for the entire Los Rios College System, and that will help pay for Phase II.

"The district has approximately $5 million towards Phase II from Measure M," Pimental explained. "Phase II will cost approximately $12 million."

So building it will depend partly on help from state bond funds as well as continued enrollment growth. Best case scenario is that construction starts in 2017.

The new facility would be built next to the current structure, on a grassy area to the west close to Carol's restaurant. As for Phase III: there is no timeline yet, but construction would occur on the northern, parking-lot side of the current facility.

The next phase would allow the branch to serve more students, build a "wet lab," and offer new courses that "reflect the needs of the community," said Pimental.

A planned streetcar line

coming to the site from across the Tower Bridge can only help with the branch's success, he added.

In Loving Memory of Nancy J. Moore "Bernabovi" 10-25-41 - 1-14-15

It is with great sorrow that we announce the passing of our beautiful mother after a two month diagnosis of pancreatic cancer. Nancy passed on January 14, 2015 at Sutter Hospital in the arms of her devoted family. Nancy was born in 1941 to Louis and Nina Bernabovi and spent her childhood in Broderick California surrounded by family with deep roots in Italian and Russian culture. Nancy met the love of her life, Charles "Charlie" Moore in 1959 at Kelly's Drive-In in West Sacramento and married one year later. Nancy and Charlie made West Sacramento their life-long home and raised three children. In addition to raising three children, Nancy worked in the Devon's Jeweler's business office for decades until her retirement in 2006. The unexpected loss of our father in 2011 left our mother devastated and she never fully recovered from his passing. Our mother was a compassionate, kind, selfless and strong woman who lived for her children and grandchildren. She was happiest surrounded by family, cooking big dinners, tending to her vegetable garden, and taking care of her grandchildren. Nancy is survived by her children Elizabeth Bagdazian (Bruce), David Moore (Julia), and Brian Moore. She was adored "Nini" to grandchildren Rachel Bagdazian, Erika Hungate (Chay), Michael Moore, Adam Moore and great granddaughter Lyla Hungate. Nancy is also survived by her sister Carol Laury (Bob) and Lori Nieto-Moore who was a great source of comfort and care during our mother's final months. Nancy was preceded in death by her husband Charles Moore, parents Louis and Nina Bernabovi, and sister Sharon Pinto (Bernabovi). True to our mother's character, she faced the last two months of illness with the same quiet dignity in which she has always lived her life. In our inconsolable grief, we cling to the hope that she has found her way back to our father, her beloved Charlie. At Nancy's request there are no services. Remembrances can be made to the American Cancer Society.

work. We also had two pet dogs. We train each service dog for a year and a half and then return them to the headquarters for six months of additional training."

"We taught them basic obedience skills: Sit Down, Come Here and Stay," she explained. "We taught the dogs to jump up and put their paws in your lap; so if a person is in a wheelchair, the dog will come to the person and deliver something."

From taking those classes, Jamie learned about positive reinforcement. "The main tool that you used with positive reinforcement is clicking. The sound of a clicker marks the behavior that you are going to reinforce."

So, Jamie decided she wanted to learn more about animal training and signed up for a course organized by Karen Pryor.

"I signed up for a course with her. The company sent me the course materials. I would be certified by her organization as a clicker trainer, and that if I am training an animal, I will use the positive reinforcement method."

Jamie has been using the clicker method with on her own dogs for 10 years.

She currently has three Labrador retriever/Golden retriever mixes: four years old, nine years old, and 10 years old. Each had been trained to become a service dog but for one reason or another didn't make the final cut. For instance, one of her dogs freaked when a wheelchair turned over onto him.

"As to the chickens," Jamie said, "I just want to make sure that they are well-taken care of, learn about them, and see what I got myself into."

As preparation, Jamie sought advice from a friend that has chickens and did further researched on the Internet. Jamie and her

The loss was estimated at $1,600.

Jan. 27 11:06 a.m.

A 23-year old homeless man was contacted after littering in front of a police officer.

The man said he was not on probation, although a records check showed otherwise — he was on probation out of Tehama County. The man was also found to be in possession of “shaved keys” (often used in thefts) and a knife. He was arrested.

Jan. 27, 7:07 p.m.

Police responded to the report of a shoplifter who tried to take $10.85 worth of batteries and candy from a Riverpoint Court store. They issued the thief a notice to appear in court.

Jan. 28

On Holland Drive:

A woman was “cleaning her deceased brother’s residence and could not find (his) wallet, keys and savings bonds. Landlord also made inconsistent comment which raised concern.”

Jan. 28

Somebody stole an auxiliary fuel tank from a company vehicle parked on Industrial Boulevard. The loss was valued at $150.

Jan. 28, 12:13 a.m.

An officer conducted a traffic stop on a 19-year old man driving at Jefferson and Park Boulevards. The officer spotted “metal knuckles in plain sight” and cited and released him for that infraction.

Jan. 28, 1:45 a.m.

Police responded to a domestic violence incident in Southport. The woman said her intoxicated husband was angry that she wouldn’t give him back a phone, and he jumped on her in bed and pushed over a dresser to intimidate her. After being arrested and read his Miranda rights, the man declined comment.

Jan. 28, 8 a.m.

Someone stole copper wiring from 14 light posts in an apartment complex on the 2400-block of West Capitol, causing about $1,000 in damage.

Jan. 28, 1:30 p.m.

During one of several West Sacramento parole/probation checks, police at a Kinsington Street home found two shotgun shells in the 46-year old subject’s bedroom. He was arrested.

Jan. 28, 5:45 p.m.

Police took a report regarding a 29-year old smoke shop clerk who sold tobacco products to a minor.

Jan. 28, 4:24 a.m.

An officer contacted a homeless woman “on the sidewalk yelling for help” at 4th and F streets. She was apparently the victim of an assault by her boyfriend in Sacramento. She was taken to a hospital for treatment.

Jan. 28, 3 p.m.

A Mulvaney Place woman said an unknown man who knew her name called her and said “she was going to find her dead body in a ditch.”

Jan. 29, 12:45 a.m.

An officer responded to Gadwall Court to talk to a man who said he had been robbed during an incident on Evergreen Avenue.

The man said he had been driving eastbound when “a white and blue RV pulled out in front of him and blocked his path while another vehicle pulled behind him.”

Then, the RV driver got out, as did the victim. The other driver pulled a handgun and hit him in the head with it. The victim fell to the street unconscious. Meanwhile, two or three other men got out of the vehicles and assaulted him, taking two rings and a wallet with $600 to $800 in it.

The RV was later located near 7th and G Street, and the driver was arrested. He was identified as a 53-year old Elverta man.

Jan. 29, 6 a.m.

A man reported his $499 bike stolen at his Dorothy Adamo Lane apartment complex.

Jan. 29, 11:30 a.m.

At Southport’s Town Center Plaza, a woman reported a female acquaintance had phoned her at work and “made threats to assault” her. It was an “ongoing problem.”

Jan. 29, 3:30 p.m.

A woman reported her 12-year old grandson’s $700 bike was stolen at a Riverpoint Court store.

Jan. 29, 4 p.m.

A police officer spotted a known 41-year old transient, who was on probation, in a Ford truck on Maple Street. A search showed he was in possession of a $60,000 bone saw reported stolen from a Sacramento hospital.

The man also had a stolen all terrain vehicle (“ATV”) in the back of the truck, and had cannabis in the form of “honey oil” and a “marijuana shake” in a backpack.

The officer contacted a Sacramento deputy, who reported that a security video showed the suspect stealing the saw from the hospital after receiving treatment in their emergency room.

The man “admitted he knew the medical equipment was stolen, and he was returning it.” Same with the ATV.

The man went to jail anyway.

Jan. 29, 7:30 p.m.

Reported by a Huckleberry Circle woman:

“Unknown person took the victim’s shoes from her front porch.” The loss was valued at $50.

Jan. 29, 9:45 p.m.

At a drug store on West Capitol:

“The two suspects entered the store and grabbed vodka. An employee at the front door told them they would not leave with the bottle. The employee was pushed out of the way and another employee was hit in the face. The suspects left with the booze.”

Art + food: Broderick restaurant will participate in agrarian arts project

From YoloArts

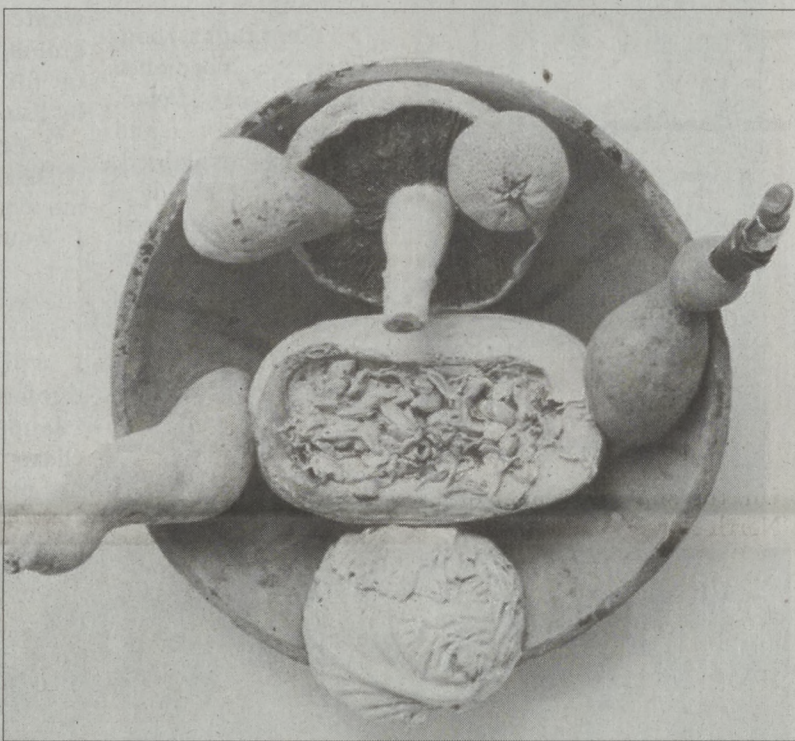

“Food for Thought” features paintings, ceramics, photography and mixed media drawings inspired from the agrarian scenes and products of Yolo County farms. The four artists chosen for this group exhibition opening February 6 at Gallery 625 have also been commissioned by YoloArts to create a work of art for the upcoming ArtFul Place project, an experience bringing together art, artists, restaurants and locally grown food. The artists showing their work are: Danielle Collins, Lynne Cunningham, Linda S. Fitz Gibbon and Claire Haag.

These artists have been going to Yolo County farms and farmers markets and participating in YoloArts’ Art & Agriculture Project, a program offering artists an opportunity to create while on private farm property while the farmers get to showcase their work to a creative culture looking for such an intimate experience with the land. Linda S. Fitz Gibbon of Davis:

The ArtFul Plates bearing the artwork of these artists will be available: February 20 - March 13 at Maria’s Cantina in Woodland and Preserve Public House in Winters featuring the art of Haag and Cunningham, respectively; and May 22 - June 12 at Monticello in Davis, and Broderick Roadhouse in West Sacramento featur-

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"The Theory of Everything" (PG-13) -- Renowned scientist Stephen Hawking is best known as the man who revolutionized the way we think about time and space, even as a debilitating disease left him unable to move or speak on his own. This biopic spans many decades, but focuses primarily on the romance between two brilliant Cambridge students -- Hawking (Eddie Redmayne) and his first wife, Jane (Felicity Jones) -- and their struggle as Hawking's health starts to rob him of life's simplest things.

By keeping the film centered on this story of young love and the hardships that assail it, "The Theory of Everything" has more to say about human emotion than it does about black holes or quantum mechanics. The performances by Redmayne and Jones elevate the film.

"The Interview" (R) -- James Franco plays a charismatically stupid celebrity interviewer, and Seth Rogen is his best friend/producer who grows concerned that they'll never be taken seriously. It just turns out that Kim Jong-Un, the supreme leader of North Korea, is a huge fan of Franco's show and wants an interview. The U.S. government (represented here by Lizzy Kaplan) presses the two stooges into using the interview to covertly kill the dictator.

This goofball comedy was the spark that sent threats flying between nations and arguments raging over free speech. Even with all the hoopla, the movie is more "Pineapple Express" than "Dr. Strangelove." You'll laugh, but this isn't the movie that breaks the mold with profundity or global awareness.

"St. Vincent" (PG-13) -- Vincent (Bill Murray) is an anti-social old man who might have a heart of gold buried under his nasty rejoinders, laziness, perpetual hangover and scary gambling debts. He's thrown into babysitting for his new neighbors, a sweet single mom (Melissa McCarthy, not as an over-the-top screwball) and her picked-upon young son (Jaeden Lieberher). Vincent lets the boy into his world of racetrack gambling, strippers and dive bars, which somehow helps both of them grow as people. Murray fits into this role like it was meant for him (shockingly, it wasn't), keeping things even with the movie's super-sappy sentimental side.

"Life Itself" (R) -- This documentary was started with the intent to make a film about the life of a noteworthy man, but ended up as a film about his death as well. It's also a deeply impactful documentary about what makes us love movies and how truth works its way onto film. Famed movie critic Roger Ebert collaborated with documentarian Steve James in deciding how he should be shown in the film -- as honestly as possible, even the grim reality of his last days with cancer. The result is simply moving, a movie about the past as much as it is about what's happening during its creation.

"Downton Abbey: Rules for Household Staff" introduction by Mr. Carson

(St. Martin's Press, $14.99)

Review by Larry Cox

Without a doubt, "Downton Abbey" has become one of the most popular series on public television. First appearing in the United Kingdom in 2010, the series made its American debut on PBS the following year and became an immediate hit. Season five is now underway.

Much like "Upstairs, Downstairs," the plot focuses on an aristocratic family and its staff. Set at a fictional estate in Yorkshire, the day-to-day life of the Crawley family unfolds during the early years of the past century.

What makes "Downton Abbey" so fascinating is its attention to detail. The various duties of staff members such as the footman, lady's maid, housekeeper and groundsman, and what each is expected to accomplish with "effortless dignity, finesse and pride," are detailed. These tasks include how to set a proper table, put together a proper tea tray and even how to leave a room quietly in order to be as unobtrusive as possible.

This little handbook provides guidelines for the staff so the estate will function flawlessly. From the cleaning and storing of fine silver to the preparations for hosting Their Majesties the King and Queen or other members of the Royal Family, this little guide provides an inside glimpse of the intricate workings of a grand estate in Britain a century ago.

Although there is no actual "Downton Abbey," this guide is based on authentic manuals from the period. The hierarchy of Lord and Lady Grantham's staff underscores the necessity of order and organization to ensure that the running of such a large estate goes as smoothly as possible.

This is a fun guide and documents almost every aspect of working downstairs in a grand estate during the Victorian and Edwardian eras.

When You Give Your Heart

It seems that everything we eat and drink these days wants a piece of our heart. There are the bad-for-us foods like addictive chips, irresistible burgers, gorgeous steaks and seductive fried chicken. They're so easy to see coming, but we fall for them anyway. Then there are the good guys, who have their charms and who claim to give us what's good for us, like red wine and chocolate. It's so easy to commit to one of them because they have what we want! But the truth is that when it comes to our heart, there are only a few true-blue choices we should stay with for the long haul. As confusing and abundant as the information is that says this or that is good for us, it all boils down to a few simple qualities that make a good match for heart health.

1. Omega-3s: These are the fatty acids that possess a good kind of fat that helps prevent clogging of the arteries. These are found in fish, such as salmon, albacore tuna, hering and trout. However, Omega-3s can be found in tofu, nuts and flaxseed, and canola oil as well. Incorporate these foods into your weekly menus every chance you get.

2. Fruits and Vegetables of All Kinds: Most people don't come close to the recommended amounts suggested by the American Heart Association, which is four to five 1/2 cup to 1 cup servings per day. Try declaring one day a week a vegetarian day where all meals will be meatless, or look for meal ideas where the vegetable is the main player, like in stir-frys and salads, or bowls of fruit with grains and berries for breakfast.

3. Choose Healthy Fats and Cooking Methods: Fats are not all bad, but the most important thing you can do is limit your fat intake and keep your fats to those found in Omega-3 foods and vegetable-based oils. When cooking your food, avoid frying in large amounts of fat. Baking, steaming, grilling or sauteing in small amounts of vegetable oils or water will give you delicious food that is good for you too.

This recipe for Tofu Creme au Chocolat is a wonderful way to incorporate healthy ingredients into a romantic Valentine's holiday.

TOFU CREME AU CHOCOLAT WITH RASPBERRIES

Coffee enhances the flavors of chocolate and makes this heart-healthy dessert taste far more decadent than it really is!

- 4 ounces dark chocolate, broken into pieces
- 1 tablespoon softened butter
- 1 (14-ounce) package soft, silken tofu, drained
- 1/2 cup stevia or agave syrup
- 1/4 cup cold, strong brewed coffee
- 1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla extract
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- 1 1/2 cups raspberries, washed and dried
- 1 1/2 cups vanilla Greek yogurt

1. Melt chocolate in microwave on medium power, or in double boiler. Stir in butter until no lumps remain. In blender or food processor, blend tofu, stevia or agave syrup, coffee, vanilla extract and salt for 1-2 minutes, or until smooth and creamy.
2. Add chocolate to tofu mixture, and blend 30 seconds, or until smooth and creamy. Transfer to bowl; cover with plastic wrap, pressing firmly on the top of the pudding. Refrigerate 2 hours, or until set.
3. Serve pudding topped with a dollop of Greek yogurt and sprinkled with the raspberries. Serves 8.

husband bought a four-chicken coop, and ordered three eight-week-old hen chicks from Craigslist. She expects them to start laying eggs when they are five or six months old.

She began her training by observing the chickens' natural behavior, watching them scratching the ground and pecking something. Jamie is thinking that she might, at some point, have them peck at a target poll.

"With clicker training, you have a goal and break it down into small steps, and as that first step is achieved, then you click and you give some kind of reward. I have to find out what the chickens consider a reward."

"Unfortunately, I found out that they love mealworms. I'm going to see if I can find something else as a reward because I don't like mealworms."

"We want them to go back to the coop when I ask them to," Jamie described one of the first lessons she plans to teach her chickens.

"When they are out and they even look at the coop, I will click and throw a treat. I will do that a few times until they understand that a click means a treat is coming. Then they will do something to make me click and give them a treat."

Jamie loves learning about behavior and training. So far, she's been successful with dogs, she hopes to be able to train chickens – and one day, she expects to be able to apply it to people.
